TIPS ON USING THIS GUIDE

1

Ask a friend or work colleague to measure you in a fitted t-shirt or shirt to ensure you are getting the most accurate body measurements.

2

Refer to the images of the female body to check which areas you need to measure.

3

Write down your measurements in this document and compare to the product measurement charts. Please note that the measurements provided refer to the finished product, so be sure to make allowance – for example, the chest measurement of your shirt should be at least four centimetres bigger than your actual measurement.

4

If your body measurements cross over more than one size, select the larger size.

YOU WILL NEED:

TAPE MEASURE

PEN

MIRROR

SHOULDER

Place the tape measure on one shoulder point where the seam of your shirt is and take it across to the other side. It's best to measure your shoulders across the back.

BUST

Measure your bust at the fullest part, under your arms. You want to measure the chest keeping the tape measure slightly relaxed. Your shirt should fit firmly on the chest but not too snug. If the buttons are popping or pulling open then you know the shirt is a tad too small.

WAIST

Your natural waist is just at your belly button, and usually the narrowest part. Measure your waist while exhaling so that you can ensure a comfortable fit even when sitting down.

HIPS

Just above your hip bone is where you need to take this measurement. Take the measurement quite firmly and also cross-check against the measurement chart for our chino range as these tend to sit a bit lower than our natural waist.

SEAT

The seat is important when buying skirts and trousers. Make sure you keep the tape firm and measure at the largest part of your seat, usually 30cm from your natural waist.

SLEEVE LENGTH

Place your tape measure at your shoulder seam (at the same point where you measured your shoulders) and then with your arm straight and by your side measure just past your wrist bone by about 2 cm. You want to allow enough room so that when you move your arm, the sleeve doesn't ride up too high.

TROUSER LENGTH

It's best to take this measurement when you are wearing a pair of trousers or skirt. Place the tape measure at the waistband (keep in mind if the product is high waisted you will need to measure from the belly button and if low rise than measure from hip bone) and measure the right-hand side of your leg to the point where you want the garment to finish.
